ABSTRACT

This study analyzes the residential patterns of foreign students at a midwestern university during the years 1974-83 and surveys the housing problems encountered by those students. The first part of the investigation identifies and maps the distribution patterns on the campus and the adjacent city of Mason, Ohio.

groups: Iranians, Nigerians, Koreans, Japanese, Malaysians, and Taiwanese.

As an "experienced" foreign student in America, I would strongly ~~encourage residential designs that brought about increased interaction~~
